Subject: 401(k) fees

Dear Sirs:

I think it is time for the Department of Labor to not only make those financial firms who are responsible for the investment of citizens 401(k) dollars to reveal their true fees and cost structure, but also for the DOL to list and publish a comparison cost basis of all major plans in the United States.

This data could provide many citizens more funds for their retirement and allow public officials to gauge whether or not these firms should receive any bailout monies if they are gouging consumers or their customers.

I am employed at Ford Motor Company and they recently changed 401(k) administrators and the choices for investments were severely limited and the fees are higher.

Sincerely,

Andrew T. Linko
